I have always said that I pride myself on lyric writing. In my opinion, it's the only thing that people can seriously take an understanding too, when hearing my music. Creating an impact is my aim. All I Know is about working hard to keep that spark alive, whilst feeling confused and uncertain. It talks about being unsure about where that spark may take you, and what the result may be. But even with this in mind, it doesn't matter, because all you have is them, and they are all you know. Those little moments of confusion can make the path so unclear. It can make that path turn from direction to direction. The book will turn from page to page. The journey will be full of tails and uncertainties, but when you reach your destination, it all becomes okay again.
